To Caroline Weston

[?] The writer begins with a discussion of the contributions to an Anti-Slavery fair. Says James Russell Lowell's ideas on the "editorial plan" are very good. "He goes against initials ..."but Edmund Quincy reported that Bourne Spooner told him that the Abolitionists insisted on them. Sydney H. Gay probably wrote to the subscribers about this, but will probably have to do it all over again. Tells about preparations for the Fair.

.Park St., Bristol, England. Expresses gratification by the visit of Garrison and F. Douglass. Praises Garrison's patient manner and his zeal. Emphasizes the influence of Christian teaching on Garrison's ideas and actions. Garrison was generally surrounded by intense sympathizers; however, the writer tried to get friends who were infected by the British & Foreign Anti-Slavery Society to meet him. The writer has read in the Liberator the complimentary notice of her father's pamphlet. "Here it does just the work he designed it for." Frederick Douglass, wherever he goes, "arouses sympathy in your cause & love for himsel[illegible]" Articles for the Boston bazaar are beginning to pour [illegible]n Auxiliary League is to be formed.

Dublin, Ireland. Tells that F. Douglass was more eloquent everywhere than in Dublin, where there were comparatively poor audiences, little opposition, and "no great rich people to pique him to effort." Mr. J.B. Estlin was greatly delighted with Garrison as his house-guest. The writer quotes from Mr. Estlin's letter regarding Garrison and Douglass. Joseph Barker is a remarkable man, a popular independent preacher, author, and printer, whom the writer has crammed with anti-slavery information. James Haughton "is a jewel. . ." The writer"preaches Garrison right and left." After visiting

To Caroline Weston

:Dorchester, Mass.: The writer is eager to see the addressee. Has heard from E. Quincy that the addressee has left her job in New Bedford. Hopes she will locate in Boston to greater advantage. Is glad that "so pleasant an arrangement has been made for Miss Chapman so that her family losses will in part be made up by your sister and her children." Mrs. M. W. Chapman's giving up of her house will, according to E.Quincy, require the discontinuance of the Anti-Slavery fair, as there would be no other place in the city to store the goods. Remarks on the change in the attitude toward the abolition of slavery. Even the Christian Register is steeped in it. The writer has lived with pro-Slavery people all summer.

«Brattleboro, Vt.» The writer's reaction to a recent article by the addressee on "fallacies of nomenclature" in the Standard. Asks whether anything "specially called forth" her "blow at Fourierism." Expresses some thoughts on the Association Movement. There are two classes of Associationists. One class believes that slavery can be abolished effectually only by Association, but this does not advocate immediate emancipation. The second class thinks that slavery must be abolished "before the question of the full elevation of Labor can be thoroughly brought home..." The writer's own zeal for the anti-slavery cause has grow[illegible] proportion to his increasing trust in Association. Is co[illegible]ced that "Antislavery victory must be won, before our day of triumph for Association can come."

[Bristol, England] The writer says contributions to the Fair are being produced in quantity. Will send 100 copies of the Brief Notice to the Fair. Has had his name printed on the cover. Says the Christian Reformer has started publishing Anti-Slavery articles. Condemns Garrison's meddling in English political affairs. Says Abolition is only for the upper classes. Gives an example of a very impolitic remark made by W.L.G. Condemns his association with Henry Vincent. Says Douglass is doing very well. The English Quakers are opposed to Garrison. Mentions the stranding of the S.S. Great Britain. Thinks W.L.G. will de[illegible]p greater sympathy for the Unitarians than for any oth[illegible]ass. Dublin, Ireland. The writer begins his letter on the steamer on the way to Liverpool to see Garrison off. Has sent a Liberty Bell and a copy of "Martyr Age" to the poet (Thomas) Moore. Thinks the addressee's application (that Moore contribute to the Liberty Bell?) will not be successful: "he is too old and worldly to enter with poetic zeal into such a cause as ours." Does not expect much help from the literati of England. The writer attributes Frederick Douglass' steadiness to Garrison's influence. He was a master of language and ... had more the soul of a poet than nine tenths of the poets in the English language ..." Reminisces about his first meeting with Rogers and Garrison at the time of the World Convention of 1840. Rogers became one of the writer's most intimate and valued correspondents. To Dr. John Bishop Estlin

«Boston» The writer describes an interview with Garrison. Mentions the purchase of Douglass' freedom. Hopes that the English Unitarians will support the Inquirer and Mr.Hincks. Criticizes "Amicus" for misquoting Dr. Channing. Received Vol.13 of Chambers' Miscellany. Mentions Dr. Howe. Quotes Garrison as saying that the English "bear away the palm" for ingenuity in framing excuses for slaveholding. The writer defends Garrison's meddling in English politics. Refers to the loss of the Great Britain, but discusses at length the wreck of the Atlantic on Nov.27th.

To "My dear Friend"[Mrs.Maria(Weston)Chapman]

[Dublin, Ireland] A Major Colthurst wishes Garrison to read a journal of experiences in the West Indies, with a view to publication in America. The writer tells in detail about the care taken in the sending of a box (which has apparently not arrived). Intends to send a copy of a letter from (William) Goodell, which the writer would like to see published in the Standard with notes by Wendell Phillips. Thomas Moore is in poor health; the writer has had no reply from him. The writer has "begged on all hands" for the Liberty Bell, with little success. Summarizes the ideas expressed in William Goodell's letter. Inquires about (Ge[illegible]) Bradburn and regrets that "he is not at one with you."

«Boston» The writer describes packet ships, their rates and schedules. Tells about a pamphlet on the Slave Power by John G. Palfrey. Gives a biographical sketch of Mr. Palfrey. Comments on pamphlets he is sending to Dr. Estlin. Asks if Dr. Estlin received the Clay and Foster portraits. "Mr. Palfrey expressed very strongly his conviction that they who lived 20 years longer would see the complete overthrow of Slavery in this land." Condemns the Evangelical Alliance for supporting Slavery. More comments on Garrison's conduct in England, and Mr. Haughton's article on Mrs. Dana. Praises G. Thompson. Gives a biogr[illegible]ical sketch of George Bancroft. Says he plans to go to Bro[illegible], Conn.

«West Roxbury, Mass.» Having been asked to contribute to the Liberty Bell, the writer asserts that there is no lack of subject matter. Especially points out that the horrors of the slave trade rouse indignation, "but we have no hard words & no unkind thoughts when our neighbor is the slave trader." The reason why the writer has not responded is that he believes there are many abler writers than himself, and he encloses instead a sum to be used toward the publication.

To "Dear friend" «Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman»

«Watertown, Mass.» The writer has determined not to comply with the addressee's request that he speak some evening at the fair. Explains the reason: the directing spirit of both the Mass. and the American Antislavery societies seems to the writer narrow and intolerant. Gives examples, as the assertion that no abolitionist can consistently remain in a pro-slavery church or party. Recalls that "the treatment a man differing from ourselves receives in our meetings, is such as to prevent anyone from wishing to bear it more than once." The writer's decision rests mainly on his seeing no reason why the Chronotype should be considered less fit as an advertising medium than the Post [illegible]tlas.

Extract from letter

« ? » The writer discusses the different opinions held by Abolitionists in regard to the proper manner of attacking slavery. Speaks of Garrison's character, and his part in the Abolitionist cause. Criticises Garrison's choice of English associates and his failure to confine his activities to the Anti-Slavery cause. Asks for support for the Abolitionists in New England.

To Rev. Samuel May Jr.

«Bristol, England» The writer says he is sending a packet of printed notices, etc. by a ship which had come into Bristol to refit. Asks for a subscription to the Liberator. Received a daguerrotype of Garrison from R.D. Webb and marvels at the fine detail. Has been working on a new school. His Brief Notice is out of print, but he is having additional copies made. Asks advice on corrections. Has met Henry Clapp Jr. Seems apprehensive about Clarkson's Last Thoughts. Douglass enjoys great popularity. The A-S League moves rather slowly. Wants news of the Fair. Confers with Douglass and others about A-S League declarations of principle. Will send inkstand and mone[illegible] Douglass. His Narrative was translated into French by a [illegible]s Parkes.

To the Executive Committee of the American Anti-Slavery Society

«Farmington, N.Y.» The writer wants reinforcements of Mass. Abolitionists. Giles B. Stebbins will continue as a volunteer agent. The writer has employed Nelson Bostwick as a paid agent. Will secure the services of E. A. Marsh of Rochester. The box of merchandise for the Anti-Slavery fair appeared to have been opened and ransacked. Gives the results of the fair. The annual meeting of the Western New York Society was very successful. "E. Quincy's discussion with Gerrit Smith is doing a great work." Wants Garrison "to write more for the Standard. ...his pen [illegible] peculiarly adapted to the meridian of Western N.Y."

To Messrs. Bates, Hanson & White

Weymouth, (Mass.), The Weymouth Female Anti-Slavery Society wants the use of the Orthodox Meeting House "for the purpose of hearing an Anti-Slavery lecture from Mr. Garrison." The writer explains why the request is made every year even though it is always refused. The Universalist Meeting House is available, but the Orthodox parishioners won't go there. Says that the pro-Slavery Orthodox churches protect their followers from Anti-Slavery doctrine. "Could the infamous war with Mexico continue another month were all the churches of the Free states thrown freely open to the Anti-Slavery lectures?" Gives general arguments in [illegible] of allowing the Abolitionists to use the church.

To Rev. Samuel May Jr.

‹Dublin, Ireland› The writer mentions the Address of the Irish Unitarians and "the mean subterfuge resorted to to avoid giving any reply to it." Says he hears that Dr. Dewey has been pleading for the slaveholders and that a slaveholder was elected president of the American Unitarian Association. Says the Evangelical Alliance delegates were coldly received in Ireland. Does not think that the Liberty Party can do much for the slaves. Says the Society of Friends accepted contributions from slaveholders but not money raised by a theatrical benefit performance. Mentions the Irish confederation.

«Dublin, Ireland» The writer tells about an elderly friend who admires Napoleon and hates Daniel O'Connell. The friend reproached James Haughton for inconsistency, etc. yet the writer knows no man "more stern in his obedience to duty than he is." The writer says that his cousin Maria Webb cannot understand that it is impossible to promote the American Anti-Slavery Society and the Liberty Party "both together." He thinks that Garrison "settled Goodell very handsomely in a late Liberator." Yet it seems to him that if the extent of the numbers, labors and sacrifices of the Liberty Party be true, "it would be better [illegible] should frankly admit it." Saw a set of 14 volumes of th[illegible]rator for sale and would like to know their price. The writer, having read the addressee's objections to giving to famine relief in Ireland, criticises

To Dr. John Bishop Estlin

[Leicester, Mass.] The writer tells how the correspondence between him and Dr. Estlin got started. Met Douglass on his return. D. was denied a berth on the steamship returning to America. He is in great demand to attend meetings here. The writer acknowledges the receipt of pamphlets. Will send books and pamphlets. Tells about the Wilmot Proviso. Deplores(!) the success of the American Army in Mexico. Discusses William P. Atkinson and the Unitarians. No slaveholder will hold office in the American Unitarian Association. Says Dr. Gannet has swung over to Abolition. Commends a notice of George Sand in Howitt's Journal. Mentions Miss Carpenter and the Bristol Ragged School.

To "My dear Friend": Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman.

:Dublin (Ireland). The writer mentions a picture of W.E. Channing and comments on the Garrisonians' attitude toward him. "I feel a good deal enlightened by all you have told me about William Goodell." Notes an inconsistency in the attitude of the Garrisonians toward the adherence of their followers to non-Abolitionist churches and political parties. "It seems to me the most natural thing in the world that the Americans to whom politics are the breath of life should think that nothing can be done without a political party." Gets the impression that the U.S. Constitution ranks with the Bible. The Old Organization Abol[illegible]onists are held to number too many heretics in their ra[illegible] by other Abolitionists. does not seem to "go the whole hog" with any party. The writer does not think those who differ with the Old Organization are necessarily dishonest. Thinks F. Douglass is jealous of G. Thompson. The writer mentions his letters in the National Anti-Slavery Standard. Says he liked Mary Howitt. "Just now, James Haughton who loves popularity, is extremely unpopular... He is a corn factor" and has been blamed for the food shortage. The writer agrees that Anti-slavery funds should not be used for the purchase of a slave's freedom. Discusses the problems of the Irish farmer. "I tell you it is a miserable country... and I would be heartily gl[illegible]o be well out of it." Complains that F. Douglass treats J[illegible]uffum shamefully.

"Atrocious war with Mexico" is not popular. American arms successful. "Religious sectarists" «sic», who hate Catholicism, share in satisfaction. •Dedham, Mass.?• The writer reports on a Board meeting of the Mass. Anti-Slavery Society. Addison Davis is "getting up a quarrel with us. He was not satisfied with the agency we gave him in the Spring ... we are inclined to throw him overboard." Fears there will be trouble with F. Douglass's compensation, as he supposedly thinks his services worth more than anyone else's. "Sam May seems full of business & works well." The writer will spend the night with him in Leicester, and then attend the First of August meeting in Worcester. The writer saw Mrs. Maria (White) Lowell at Nahant, looking beautiful, but ill. A fragment[illegible] description (on the reverse of the signed page) is concern[illegible]ith a Unitarian minister, "the translator of Undine & author of some 'Minor Romances'..." «Cork, Ireland?» Describes conditions west and south of this city (Cork?): "every year numbers die of want." Records the illness of her eldest brother, and the death of "our two benevolent associates Mrs. and Miss Nash" and others in the Anti-Slavery Society. Most active among its workers are those who knew F. Douglass. "In all his intercourse here he evinced the highest regard for his wife and children." He avoided "confidential conversations with young ladies," although one or two were "rather absurd in their over-attention." Further expatiates on Douglass' character. It allows a slaveholder to salve his conscience and does not call for any attempt on the part of the slaveholder to rehabilitate the slave.. A.L.S. 4 p. 5 x 4 in.

In a postscript, the writer states that he could get a short statement from Dr. «Martin» Gay about Dr. «Charles Thomas» Jackson's claim to the discovery of ether inhalation inserted in one or two leading medical journals.

[Bristol, England] The writer objects strenuously to the deleting of "offensive personalities" from his Tagart letter by the editor of the Christian Register. Says that a majority of the English Unitarians oppose the proposed Address. The Abolition movement lacks a distinguished representation among the English clergy. Says that the Howitt-People's Journal dispute passes unnoticed. Thinks that some of the English Unitarians may protest against the attitude of James, Armstrong and other towards the American Unitarians. Thinks Frederick Douglass' friend, Mrs. Richardson, sympathizes with the Liberty party.

«Clapton, (London)» Thanks the addressee for her kind letter. Refers to a "bitterly unkind" article in the National Anti-Slavery Standard."That article brought with it sleepless nights & cost me tears." Although the article was written by a Mr. Briggs, the author of Harry Franco, the writer imagines that "the animus of that article proceeds from this country-from the malicious, bad people in the Peoples' Journal, who are doing all they can to ruin us entirely." Mentions especially a John Dix, known in America by the name of John Dix Ross, "an unfortunate drunkard & thief but who is allied with Mr. (John) Saunders against us & who has attempted to cast a stigma on my character re[illegible]ing an article on Lowell which

[Dedham, Mass.] The writer forwards a letter from S. H. Gay dealing apparently with the question of an advertisement. Asks when the addressee and her sisters can attend a Board meeting, to consider, among other matters, "whether anything, & if anything what should be done to botch up the Howitt ~~people?~~ (bungle?)" This should be settled at the first Board meeting "after the article appeared." The writer has received the note from the addressee and Anne W. Weston "about the Unitarians." However, lacking the necessary documents needed for an article on this subject, the writer "took the Wilmot Proviso as leader."

«Dublin, Ireland» It is very kind of "the clique" to insist on the writer's crossing the Atlantic. However, though always out of debt, the writer is by no means "riding on the crest of the waves of fortune like Richard Allen." The writer would rather see the Abolitionists face to face than Rome or Athens. Received from H. C. Wright a letter from Halifax, which was intended for publication. The writer considers the habit of holding oneself before the public apt to result in a style neither natural or pleasing. Regrets that C. C. Burleigh is not to go abroad. The writer has only a slight acquaintance with the Howitts. [illegible] take them to be an upright, independent, well-minded pa[illegible] Thinks William Howitt to be quick-tempered, perhaps apt to take offence. "I greatly like his wife." Thinks "they have been entrapped by «John» Saunders to their very great annoyance and pecuniary loss." The writer judges Saunders to be a rascal from the fact that W. Howitt has published statements about Saunders that would entitle him to large damages for libel if they could be refuted. As Harriet Martineau remains the only contributor of note to the People's Journal, the writer suspects that she takes Saunders's side. Hears that R. W. Emerson intends to be in England in a few weeks and encloses an invitation for him to stay with the writer. It has se[illegible]d better not to circulate appeals for the Boston fair [illegible] year since "the extent of poverty and pauperism in Ire[illegible] is really frightful." Sends a

A Lutheran minister, the Rev. Mr. McCoues, has asked James Haughton to become a contributor to the National Era. The writer tells about the education of his children at home. Perceives the advantage of a "very nearly nonresistant education." F. Douglass showed "wonderful pluck to keep from striking that ruffian who haled him out of the Railway car." To "My dear friend" «Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman»

«Worcester, Mass.» The writer calls attention to the New York field, where "the lines between Old Organization and Liberty Party and the Leaguers are not well drawn." Does not consider Joseph C. Hathaway qualified for the work there. S. S. Foster suggests Parker Pillsbury. The writer is troubled about F. Douglass's starting a paper in Cleveland. Believes that two Disunion papers cannot be sustained in the West, and is afraid that Douglass's paper will supplant the Anti-Slavery Bugle. The writer says confidentially that she has always feared Douglass, that the "manner of his proceeding in this matter was not quite honorab[illegible] He consulted none of the more active Western Abolitio[illegible]s except Samuel Brooke. ‹New Bedford, Mass.› The writer is pleased that the addressee and Lizzy (Elizabeth B. Chapman) are having such a pleasant time in New York. Expresses appreciation of the addressee's and Caroline Weston's "very valuable present." The writer has been in poor health. Gives an account of visitors and news of friends. There have been some fine preachers here lately. Mentions the peace and Abolition sermon of the Rev. Mr. Holland from Rochester, N.Y., and writes with enthusiasm about Rev. (John) Weiss. Describes the "muss the Lyceum are in," and their disagreeable [illegible]duct toward "our course" (the Lecture Association).

«Wigham Hill, Walthamston, Essex» The writer takes much pleasure in contributing to the (Boston) bazaar. Having received from the addressee a number of autographs of "those who had distinguished themselves in the anti-slavery movement," the writer requests in addition those of Wendell Phillips and others. Would also much like to have Mrs. (Eliza Lee) Follen's. The writer's mother, nearly eighty years old and with failing eyesight, has knitted a dozen pair of garters for the bazaar. The writer's sister Caroline has made the pencil drawings; mentions those of Thomas Clarkson's residence.

<Bristol, England> The writer thinks that Rev. May is too hard on Tagart. Most English Unitarians can't see how they can help the slaves. Douglass' Narrative came out in a Paris newspaper. The writer has paid £24 to have 500 copies printed in book form. Hopes for reimbursement from Sturge and the B. & F. A-S Soc'y. and others. The English Unitarians are having trouble with their Address. Miss Carpenter wants female signatures. Discusses Miss C. at length. The writer thought Garrison would get sick. Suspects Douglass' English friends wanted to detach him from Garrison. The writer was told by Henry MacDowell Grant, West Indian planter, that the plantations can't get labor [illegible] says that Cuban slave-grown sugar undersells W.I. sugar [illegible]he English market. The writer's health is much improved, and he has been working "thundering hard" on the affairs of the Lecture Association. Tells in the form of a trope, comparing the Association to a ship, of its surprising success, and of the predicament of the rival Lyceum. "The orthodox call us Infidels & hypocrits." The Rev. Mr. (John) Weiss "preached a Red Hot Abolition sermon ... which gave universal satisfaction." Confides to the addressee that Mr. Weiss will probably be appointed. «Bristol, England» Writes for her father to say that he could not produce a suitable essay for the Liberty Bell, "his habit having been always to write with some stated object." Mentions that his health is not good at present. Emphasizes her father's continued devotion to the Anti-Slavery cause. Refers especially to "the Unitarian reply to the clerical invitation which is in progress," and to his efforts for the publication of F. Douglass' Narrative in France. They thought it would be "impolitic to make ourselves prominent as A.S. advocates by applications for aid for the Bazaar at the very time that my Father is givi[illegible]ffence to many by representing his views of the duty of th[illegible]inisters & others in relation to the question." To "My Dear Friend" «Richard Davis Webb?»

«Clapton (London)» Gives an exposition of the wrong done the writer by (John) Saunders (editor of the People's Journal). "He now confesses that he has spent £1,000 to put us down." The writer is threatened with ruin. "The rumour of his debts has for some time had that effect on our own creditors." While friends and relatives have done nothing for them (the writer and his wife), "those whom we had treated as enemies" are the first to assist them. Mentions especially Dr.(John) Campbell of The Christian Witness, "whom for the sake of Garrison we had sharply assailed." States that "Garrison himself turned a cold shoulde[illegible]" The writer excepts Wendell Phillips, F. Douglass, H.C[illegible]ght, Maria Weston Chapman and the addressee from those of [illegible]e Anti-Slavery party who deserve "utter condemnation in this case." (with envelope)

.Leeds, England. The writer is worried because the box sent by Garrison from Leeds has not arrived. The ladies are much disappointed, but have nevertheless again collected a few contributions for the bazaar and have sent a box directed to the addressee. This contains also 4 pounds in gold, wrapped in paper, a parcel for F. Douglass from Miss Holland, etc. The ladies would like to know if the articles in the box are suitable. They would also like to know if the addressee's purpose could not be served as well by their selling of a few smaller articles in England and sending the proceeds. The 4 pounds enclosed were ch[illegible] raised in this way.

«Athole Place, Higher Broughton, Manchester, Engl.» Within the last few months they have formed a small anti-slavery society in Manchester, the "first fruits" of which will be sent to the Bazaar by the Britannia. The writer hopes they will do better another year when the depression will be felt less. Describes the membership of the society. "Our members are not well informed on the bearings of the question." Some of them speak depreciatingly of "Garrison's strong language" and would like to send a remonstrance, but have agreed to refrain from doing so. In half an hour the writer is going to hear Emerson. Having heard [illegible]yle, the writer expects "to be able to hear Emerson wit[illegible]itude especially as he is more seraphic & calmer than [illegible] English 'strong spirit'." [Dublin (Ireland)] This letter is partly concerned with (13 Nov 1847) fair business and includes statement of accounts. The writer received a letter from (Sidney Howard) Gay touching on "the Howitt affair," Gay observing that "when his friend (Charles Frederick?) Briggs wrote the tactless (?) notice of Homes and Haunts he was quite innocent of any connexion between the Howitts & the A.S. cause." He feels that he has mortally offended the addressee. The writer thinks that "if Briggs be a good abolitionist, he is certainly to be preferred to all the Howitts in the world." «Belfast» The writer informs Mrs. Chapman on behalf of the Belfast Ladies Antislavery Committee that they sent a box of articles for the Boston Bazaar. Each piece of work has been marked at the supposed price of the materials. Mentions the "valued friend" Frederick Douglass in connection with the contributions. Excuses the smallness of the offering on the ground that the peculiarly destitute state of the poor in her country has engrossed the attention of those who would otherwise have contributed to the American Bazaar. Many of the things in the box were purchased at a recent relief bazaar "with the express view of p[illegible]nting them to you." Continues to receive newspapers publ[illegible] by both organizations of the American Abolitionists, and [illegible] convinced of the propriety of «Boston» The writer tells about his daily life. Describes a trip to South Hingham. Is worried about the Bristol box for the Fair. The ship carrying it was delayed. Says other boxes have come from St. Petersburg, Paris, Glasgow, Edinburgh, etc. The reply to the Boston Invitation has arrived. It was criticized adversely by Rev. George E. Ellis, of Charlestown, in the Christian Register. The writer intends to discontinue his subscription to the Inquirer. Discusses cost of French edition of Douglass' Narrative. Thinks Aspland lacks courage. Garrison is recovering slowly. Douglass has issued the first number of his paper. The first no. of the Mass. Review has appeared. [illegible]ologizes for advance publication of the Reply. Discuss[illegible]he criticized passages. Answers questions about the Reply to the Irish Address.
